SHUTDOWN THREAT HURLED AT U. S. PACKING INDUSTRY

'Big Four' Warned by CIO Workers To Open Negotiations or Prepare for 'Damnedest Strike.'

CHICAGO, July 16.—(AP)—Representatives of the packing house workers' organizing committee today voted to call strike at 17 plants of Armour Co. if the big packing firm declined to negotiate contracts with the CIO union.

Delegates to the national policy convention of the PWOC adopted a resolution authorizing officers of the group and bargaining committees at the various Armour plants, where the CIO aims a majority of the workers, sponsor a walkout if they fail to arrange a conference on work agreements.

They also voted to request President Roosevelt to ask Armour Co. to enter negotiations with the PWOC.

Others Threatened.
The delegates likewise empowered PWOC officials to "declare strikes where necessary" in the plants of the other members of the "big four" packing concerns—Wilson, Swift and Cudahy—if they "persist in the same attitude and fail to negotiate."

Van A. Bittner, chairman of the PWOC, declared the convention's action meant "either joint wage agreements or the damnedest strike you ever saw in this great industry."

Bittner told reporters that, if the CIO's threat and the appeal for presidential intervention failed to bring about contract conferences, the only alternative was a strike.

No Deadline.
He said the final decisions would be made by PWOC officials and national bargaining committees representing members employed by Armour, Swift, Cudahy and Wilson. No deadline was fixed.

The PWOC claimed it had been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as the sole bargaining agent in Armour plants in Chicago, Kansas City, Kan., St. Joseph, Mo., Sioux City, Iowa, Macon City, Iowa, South St. Paul, Minn., West Fargo, N. D., Denver, Colo., Indianapolis and National City, Ill.; that it had been recognized as the sole bargaining agency at Armour plants in Milwaukee, Birmingham, Ala., and Chicago soap works; and that it had "proven majorities" in Armour plants in Fort Worth, Texas, Oklahoma City and Omaha, Neb.

Lewis Statement.
Strike action against independent packers also was authorized. The resolutions were approved unanimously by 856 delegates from 50 districts. Don Harris, national director, said they represented 78,000 of the 129,000 workers in the industry.

John L. Lewis, chief of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, pledged "the full support" of the CIO to the PWOC at a mass meeting of members of CIO unions in the Coliseum tonight.

A crowd of CIO officials estimated at 16,000 heard Lewis declare "the steel organizers did it in the steel industry—you can do it in the packing industry."

Huge Welcome Listed by Leaders; Conference
Plans Shakeup.

Baptist leaders of Atlanta and the south will begin final arrangements for the sixth Baptist World Alliance, opening a week's session here Saturday, with the arrival tonight of Dr. George W. Truett, of Dallas, Texas, president of the international congress.

A tremendous welcome has been planned for the leader, with officials of the church, state and city taking part.

The Truett party will arrive at Terminal station from Birmingham, Ala., at 8:30 o'clock, and will be met by an official committee headed by Dr. Louie D. Newton, general chairman, who will welcome the Alliance president in behalf of the Baptists of Atlanta and the south; Governor Rivers, who will extend felicitations in behalf of the state of Georgia, and Mayor Hartsfield, speaking for the city.

Representative city officials and business and civic leaders will comprise the welcoming committee, which includes Chief of Police M. A. Hornsby, Fire Chief C. C. Styrone, Alvin B. Cates, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Herbert B. Hayes, president of the Atlanta Junior Cham-

LENDING, SECURITY ONLY WORK AHEAD FOR LEGISLATORS

Congressional Leaders Meet With Roosevelt Today To Confer on Re- mainder of Schedule.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—Congressional leaders will talk over with President Roosevelt tomorrow the legislative schedule for the remainder of the session and perhaps receive some advice on whether to press for enactment of the administration's $2,600,000,000 lending program, regarded by many as the key to adjournment.

Considerable opposition to the lending program has developed and there are conflicting reports that it may be sidetracked for the session. Some administration supporters said most of the program could be carried out, in any event, without new legislation.

Neutrality Dead.
With most legislators agreed that neutrality is a dead issue at this session, only a final agreement on social security legislation and disposition of the lending program stands between an early windup of the session.

The senate banking committee is expected to report the lending legislation this week, but Senator Adams, Democrat, Colorado, a member, said he thought some material modifications would be made.

Adams said he would object to provisions which would permit the returns from self-liquidating projects to be placed in a revolving fund for further lending.

Wheeler's Stand.
Chairman Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, of the senate interstate commerce committee, opposed a provision which would permit the RFC to purchase railway rolling stock and lease it to the carriers. He contended that direct loans to the railroads would be better.

While the talk of shelving the program has been based on the idea that extensive debate on it might prolong the session, some members took the view that the desire on Capitol Hill for adjournment would make it easier to get the legislation through.

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, said he thought congress would be inclined to accept it and Representative Wolcott, Republican, Michigan senior minority member of the house banking committee, contended the legislation's chances improved the closer congress came to adjournment.

"I believe the Democrats will vote for it just to get it out of the way," Wolcott said. "It's a hard measure for them to oppose."

Wolcott denounced the whole program as "a subterfuge" to let the government borrow money for its own purposes outside the federal debt limit.

He said House Minority Leader Martin, Republican, Massachusetts, probably would call a meeting of the Republicans for either Tuesday or Wednesday to decide upon a course of action. Martin already has voiced his opposition to the legislation and expressed belief most of his colleagues were against it.

Derby Racers Oil Up For Trial Heats

Elimination Tests in Soap
Box Classic Will Be Run
Thursday.

Today will be a busy day in the backyards of hundreds of Atlanta youngsters who are assiduously putting last-minute touches to their home-made cars preparatory to the opening of elimination tests Thursday in the sixth annual Soap Box Derby, classic amateur event sponsored by The Constitution and Chevrolet dealers of the state.

They build 'em and race 'em themselves, do these ardent enthusiasts of speed and sportsmanship, and the joy and thrill of creation is second only to that of winning the North Georgia championship finals, to be held Saturday, and representing their home state in the national finals at Akron, Ohio, August 13.

Many a youngster in the five years in which the Soap Box Derby has been a leading attraction, has taken hammer, saw, paint brush and a heart full of hope and constructed his soap box auto, and as thrilled and eager as any is little 10-year-old Jackson Peak, of Stonewall, Ga., who this year will enter the Atlanta races for the first time.

Jackson is small, but Jackson is valiant. With little knowledge of coach building, and only the advice and support of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Jackson, with whom he has made his home practically all his life, young Peak built himself a racer about a month ago and is determined that he and his auto will give a good account of themselves when the "Derby" is in full swing.

Cheese-Maker Cites Potentialities Of Dairy Industry for Georgians

By PAUL SIMMONS,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

A Swiss-born cheese-maker who brought his art to this country 14 years ago says north Georgia could develop a rich dairying industry if the farmers would quit "tearing up" their hillside land by plowing it.

A. J. Rust, operator of what he calls the only culture cheese plant in the southeast at Smyrna, urges "permanent sod" livestock farming as an economic salvation for the tiller of hilly, rolling farms.

"Georgia rivers run red and muddy to the ocean," Rust observed yesterday. "They are heavy with fertility washed from hillside soil. Plowing did this—something that nature never intended."

Rust holds that all rolling land should be seeded to clover or some similar crop, fertilized regularly, mainly with barnyard manure, but never plowed. Such a method of farming, he says, has brought prosperity to Swiss farmers who long have followed it.

Rust uses approximately 40,000 pounds of milk in producing 4,000 pounds of cheese and other products each year for an exclusive trade. He goes to Tennessee for his milk, because, he says, it is not available in Georgia at "competitive prices."

DANZIG AND ORIENT TROUBLE WORLD DURING WEEK END

Hitler Shies From Men- tion of Free City, How- ever; Chamberlain Faces Serious Political Row.

By The Associated Press.
Two troubled spots in international affairs, Danzig and the Orient, continued to keep the world uneasy over the week end but produced few tangible developments.

Adolf Hitler, opening the German national art exhibition at Munich yesterday, made a 15-minute speech notable for its silence about the Free City and other political topics.

Nevertheless, the Danzig Nazi leader, Albert Forster, and most high Nazi officials were present and a well-informed editor wrote that "the German Reich hold that the time has come to free German-Polish relations from this (Danzig) problem."

Warns Great Britain.
With British and Japanese in the midst of conversations at Tokyo about the Tientsin blockade, the Japanese army commander at Tientsin warned Great Britain anew to change her "pro-Chiang Kai-shek policy," saying that otherwise the Tokyo negotiations would be broken off.

The commander, Lieutenant General Masaharu Honma, predicted the formation of a new central government with jurisdiction over all important Chinese towns and ports and said: "Britain must abandon her hostile character if she wishes favorable treatment."

Prime Minister Chamberlain's refusal to organize his cabinet threatened to bring on a serious political row at home just when government quarters were eager to show national solidarity.

Newspaper Comment.
Almost every newspaper in London took notice of it. The Sunday Express said the campaign to put Winston Churchill in the cabinet was "a move to drive the premier out of office." Churchill has often criticized the government sharply, arguing for a firmer foreign policy.

The Sunday Observer said keeping him out was "repugnant to the average man's notions of national common sense and personal fair play."

In Tokyo, the navy department announced that Emperor Hirohito would review Japanese fleet maneuvers off the southern Japanese coast next Friday, and the chief of the navy press section said: "The responsibility of the combined fleet is especially heavy at this time when diplomatic warfare regarding the two-year-old China incident is becoming intense."

Report Russian Bombing.
Japanese military headquarters at Hsinking, Manchoukuo, reported that Soviet Russian warplanes bombed Fururui, a railway point 200 miles east of the Mongolian border battlefield, injuring seven persons and destroying two buildings. Japanese threatened to retaliate by an air raid on Russia's Siberian air base at Blagoveshensk.

Major General William Edmund Ironside, inspector general of British overseas forces, is due to arrive at Warsaw today (Monday). An official news agency announcement there said his mission is "to co-ordinate the military strength of Britain and her allied countries on the European continent."

Cloudy, Possible Showers Forecast for City Today

Partly cloudy, with showers in the afternoon a possibility, is the weather outlook for Atlanta today, it was predicted at Candler airport weather office last night.

Temperatures will approximate those of yesterday, when the mercury glided between 67 and 92 degrees. Today, temperatures are expected to rise from 67 degrees to 90 degrees.

Corrigan Flies Straight Toward Altar

Douglas (Bewildered) Corrigan and his bride-to-be, Miss Elizabeth Marvin, San Antonio school teacher, swap grins as they wait for their marriage ceremonies at 3 p. m. today. Corrigan spent yesterday taking his fiancée and some of his in-laws-to-be for short air rides over San Antonio. His wedding day will be the first anniversary of his "wrong-way" flight across the Atlantic.

Kuhn Jailed, Charged With Drunkenness

'Beer Hall Putsch' With Count, Husband of Heiress, Fails.

WEBSTER, Mass., July 16.—(UP)—"Der Fuehrer of America" was jailed 40 minutes today while two "storm troopers" and a Polish count pooled their resources for bail after a "beer hall putsch" failed.

Fritz Kuhn, German-American Bund leader, was confined to a six-by-eight-foot cell in the town lockup for "being drunk, swearing and giving a policeman the Bronx cheer."

Kuhn, accompanied by Count Anastase A. Vonsiaty, leader of the White Russians in America, and two body guards, was released in $54 bail which the four managed to raise in small bills and change.

The count is the husband of Mrs. Marion Ream Stephens, heiress to a $50,000,000 fortune.

"He was just another wise guy who thought that this was a hick town and that he could stage one of them beer hall putsch things and be the dictator in it," Police Chief John C. Templeman said. "They don't go swearing at police in this town—drunk or sober."

"Do you know what he did when we brought him in? Why, he drew himself up and said: 'You can't do this to me. Do you know who I am?'"

"I said, 'Buddy, I don't care who you are, you're going to get a cell in the lockup and like it.'"

"He shut right up after that and

2D MINER DIES IN BLOODY HARLAN

Non-Union Worker Beaten, Knifed, 3 Shot Fatally; Guard Capt. Better.

HARLAN, Ky., July 16.—(AP)—Death of the second miner wounded in a "pitched battle" between union mine pickets and national guardsmen, the beating and knifing of a non-union miner and three fatal shootings, one attributed to current labor disorders, marked the week-end in Harlan's strife-torn soft coal field.

Daniel Noe, 39, died in a hospital today of a bullet wound in the abdomen, despite a blood transfusion given by his brother, Leander, arrested after the battle and freed on $1,000 bond so he might help his brother. Dock Caldwell, a union miner, was the first fatality. Captain John Hanberry, of the militia, wounded seriously in the firing, was reported improving.

John Collins, 32, who said he was a non-union miner employed by the Draper Mining Company at Draper, reported to national guard headquarters late today that he was attacked by five men last night near his home and beaten and knifed.

While authorities held three men for questioning in the gun deaths, Harlan looked hopefully today toward a "neutral" Knoxville, Tenn., hotel room where "peace" conferences between operators and the CIO United Mine Workers' Union were in progress.

Hearings are scheduled tomorrow for 246 men and women arrested after the skirmish last Wednesday between mine pickets and national guardsmen, in which two miners were fatally injured and six others hurt.

Willie Fee, 36, one of the men General Ellerbe Carter, militia commander, said signed warrants charging "banding and confederating" against 233 persons, was held without charges in the fatal shooting of Bill Roberts, 35, idle union miner, last night at near-by Stanfill.

Two Verda miners were held in the deaths of Frank Bryant, 30, miner, and Bradley Simpson, 25, truck driver, shot at Wallins creek last night in what Carter described as "a drunken brawl" having "no connection" with the labor situation.

BRUNSWICK MAN FATALLY INJURED BY HIT-RUN AUTO

Wading Man's Body Re- covered From River Near Lincolnton; Boat Takes Life of Youth.

Motor mishaps, a freak accident on Jackson Lake and a drowning claimed the lives of seven persons, including two children, in Georgia over the week end.

The dead:

James O. Mitchell, 28, of Savannah, Ga.

Ben Hill McKellar, 30, of Lincolnton, Ga.

L. S. Robb, 60, of Brunswick, Ga.

Sylvia Green, 3, of near Lawrenceville, Ga.

Bobby Collins, 14, of Worthville, Georgia.

Mrs. Joseph Balser, 58, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Her daughter, Ruth Balser, 23, also of Buffalo.

Robb, a prominent real estate man and dealer in large timber tracts, was killed by a hit-run driver as he was walking along the Coastal highway, about three miles south of Brunswick.

He suffered a fractured skull and other injuries when the car, described by witnesses as a "heavy coach," struck him, tossing him several feet. Witnesses failed to obtain the license number of the automobile.

Hit While Walking.
Robb was walking into Brunswick from a house, which he was having contractors repair, just about dark Saturday night. He died in City hospital at Brunswick shortly after being admitted. His wife survives.

The Green youngster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Green, who live about six miles from Lawrenceville, was instantly killed Saturday night when struck by an ice truck near her home, according to state highway patrolmen. Her neck was broken.

Lawrence Still, the driver, told Lawrenceville police the child started to cross the road and attempted to outrun the truck. He said the accident was unavoidable.

The body of the drowned man, McKellar, was found in the Savannah river several miles from Lincolnton, according to Coroner Guy Moss, of Lincolnton county, who said the man apparently had been wading across the river and stepped into a deep hole.

Missing Since Friday.
A coroner's jury said McKellar had "accidentally drowned." McKellar had been missing from his Lincolnton home since last Friday.

Mitchell, a watchman, was injured Saturday when his automobile and an Atlantic Coast Line switch engine collided at Savannah, demolishing the car and dragging it 90 feet. Mitchell was admitted to a Savannah hospital, where he died yesterday.

The accident in which Mrs. Balser and her daughter were killed occurred when their automobile, out of control, careened down a

New Type of Spy Is Active Would Name Town Ickes

FRANCE
New Type of Spy Preys on Nerves

PARIS, July 16.—(UP)—Silence settled slowly upon France's sensational spy hunt tonight following the government's threat to prosecute for publication of information dealing with the investigation being pursued throughout France by secret police.

Several leftist newspapers made a desperate attempt to fight the official ban but the majority of the press, and the conservative nationalist group in particular, only two willingly heeded Premier Edouard Daladier's warning. The premier promised in a statement yesterday to crush espionage activities no matter who was involved. The Nationalist newspapers' willingness to bury the story was understandable in view of the fact those known to have been arrested and also the principal suspects under investigation were found within their ranks.

Indications are that the whole continent is more "spy conscious" than at any time since August, 1914.

Counter-espionage services of a dozen governments are checking, trailing, chasing and arresting not only foreign spies but their own nationals in the pay of foreign governments.

The Paris Soir gives an indication of the success of the spy hunt now sweeping France by announcing that the "special service" of the surete nationale has arrested more German spies during the first three months of this year than during the whole six years preceding the World War. And this period was before police efforts were greatly stimulated by the current spy scare, which threatens to become a national scandal.

So powerful has become the effect of modern propaganda that the authorities find they are working against a new type of "spy" in addition to the traditional type whose job is to obtain military secrets. The new type is an undeclared "war of nerves" or "white war" such as the dictators originated send reams of reports home where trained psychologists and intelligence officers pore over them. They finally evolve a daily report on how effective some dictator's threats or bluffs may be in arousing war fear and upsetting the nerves of the people in a country from which the dictators seek to force concessions without firing a gun.

arranged for two powerful new air and naval bases in Africa, it was learned tonight.

One will be at Dakar, on the west coast, and the other at Tchisme, on the Aegean coast just west of Smyrna.

The staffs have completed coordination of their West African land, sea and air forces around Dakar—African point nearest the Americas—and plan to make it an "African Singapore." Dakar is destined to become the center of operations for French and British naval and air forces charged with patrolling the South Atlantic in case of war and with conveying oil tankers and food ships from British and French West Indies and South America.

The two powers have concluded an agreement with Turkey to rush construction of a formidable naval and air base at the tiny fishing port of Tchisme, to become the main base in the eastern Mediterranean for air and sea forces of the three powers.

2 CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED—25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME OF THE 15 OTHER OF THE LARGEST-SELLING BRANDS! By burning 25% slower, on the average, Camels give smokers the equivalent of 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

3 In the same tests, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER than the average time for all the other brands.

Yes, Camel's fine, slow-burning, more expensive tobaccos do make a difference. Delicate taste...fragrant aroma...smoking pleasure at its best, and more of it! Camel is the quality cigarette every smoker can afford.

Auto Is Taken, Chased, Wrecked In Ten Minutes

It happened in 10 minutes—car taken, car chased by police, car wrecked by crashing into a parked car, occupants of car arrested, car recovered.

It came about yesterday afternoon when C. V. Little, of Jacksonville, Fla., told police he saw three youths drive off in his vehicle, parked in front of 70 Fifth street, N. W.

Radio Patrolmen O. W. Allen, J. L. Thrasher and J. L. Hughes caught the police radio "flash." They reported sighting the car on Fifth street. A moment later, they said, the car struck the parked machine of C. L. Seacord, in front of his home at 159 Fifth street.

Those arrested gave their names as W. P. New, 20, of Columbia, S. C., and B. L. Timms, 19, of Hightower road. They were charged with suspicion of larceny of an automobile. Police are seeking the third youth.

CONGRESS

Monopoly Probers Ask Quick Revision

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—The monopoly committee, making a preliminary report to congress, urged today that the anti-trust laws be revised as the first step toward restoration of a "prosperous economy."

Because its work is only about half completed, the committee said it could offer no comprehensive recommendations for overhauling the economic machine. It asked, however, that congress act speedily on its preliminary proposals.

Chairman O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, told reporters Senator King, Democrat, Utah, one of the members, had not concurred in all of the findings.

Four recommendations. The committee's preliminary recommendations included: 1. Revision of patent law administration to make it speedier and more of a stimulant to private initiative.

2. Prohibiting the use of patents for the establishment of trade restrictions.

3. Amendment of the Clayton anti-trust act to prohibit corporations from acquiring the assets as well as the stock of competitors.

4. Fuller use of civil procedure as a means of enforcing the anti-trust laws.

Discussing the report with newspapermen, O'Mahoney said the committee favored revision of federal anti-trust laws so that civil damages rather than criminal penalties would make these laws "self-enforcing."

Procedure and statutes on patents, he said, must be changed so that a patent is a "personal award to the inventor of use for a limited time" instead of a basis for monopolistic control or restraint of trade.

The committee report said "the tendency toward the concentration of control of the economic system in fewer and fewer business executives seems pronounced."

"The consequence of that tendency is a steadily lessening number of competitors," it added.

Harder and Harder. "It has been the traditional conviction of the people of the United States that the opportunity of the citizen to engage in business should not be restricted and that a system of free open competition is best calculated to preserve that opportunity."

"It is clear, however, that the financial and other resources required for economic endeavor are becoming increasingly difficult for the ordinary enterpriser to obtain and that the concentration of economic power and wealth is accompanied by increasing unemployment and narrowing of markets."

O'Mahoney said future hearings would attempt to answer "what public policies should be adopted to put an end to unemployment, the inability of people to support themselves, and to promote an ever-rising standard of living for all the people, so that democratic institutions may justify themselves by establishing and guaranteeing a prosperous economy in which all elements of society may participate."

The committee reported that it had spent nearly $600,000 of the $1,010,000 voted by congress for the investigation.

Cotton Barter Deal Periled. WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—Fulfillment of the agreement between the United States and Great Britain for the exchange of cotton and rubber for war reserves may be delayed indefinitely, if a proposal being considered in congress is adopted, some congressional leaders declared today.

The agreement, signed in London June 23, provides for the exchange of 500,000 bales of surplus American cotton for about 175,000,000 pounds of British rubber.

The American government cannot carry out its ends of the bargain until congress authorizes the disposal of surplus cotton now held under loans made to growers. Such legislation, passed by the senate, is pending before the house banking and currency committee.

That committee is considering an amendment which, congressional leaders declare, would not permit the government to meet terms of the barter agreement except at considerable extra expense. Urged by warehousemen in the interior part of the cotton belt—where virtually all the surplus cotton is stored—the amendment would require that cotton be delivered to Great Britain be cleaned and graded where it is now located.

Administration spokesmen explain that the agreement requires that such grading be done at Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic Coast seaports from which it is to be shipped. The say the British government would not accept grading done elsewhere.

It has been the government's plan to move 1,000,000 bales of the class and grade requested by Great Britain would be selected. The balance would be retained at the ports for possible disposal under other agreements that might be made.

Woman Spots Fugitive

CHICAGO, July 16.—(AP)—Search for Jack Russell, sought in the kidnap-slaying of a University of Kansas graduate, turned to western suburbs today after a woman motorist reported to police she saw the escaped Oklahoma convict.

"I stopped for a traffic light in Oak Park," Mrs. Hattie Miller, 45, of Melrose park, told authorities.

When a large, green colored car drove up alongside of me. The driver kept peering at me as if he wanted to talk. He was a heavy-set man and needed a shave. When I returned home I saw his picture in the newspaper.

State police broadcast a description of the car to all stations. Russell, 39, a former cowboy, was reported seen near Marley, Ill., last night. Frank Meech, a state policeman, said he chased the fleeing convict several miles before his motorcycle ran out of gasoline.

State and federal authorities are seeking Russell in the brutal slaying of Billy S. Hamilton, 23, of Arkansas City, Kan., whose body was found in a ditch near Ringwood, Ill., Friday.

Russell also is wanted for the kidnaping of Bud Egholm, 23, of Oklahoma City, Okla., in Kenosha, Wis., Friday night and the kidnaping of R. E. Brown, of McAlester, Okla., photographer, shortly after the convict fled from a prison guard Tuesday.

Kills Daddy As Promised. DANVILLE, Ill., July 16.—(AP) A 16-year-old girl admitted today, Police Lieutenant Bireline said, that she killed her father with a shotgun after telling him: "Well, daddy, this is what I said I was going to do."

Bireline said the girl, Alta Heath, told him the shooting occurred during a quarrel at their home last night.

"Daddy" came home drunk and started abusing me and the other children," Bireline quoted Alta.

FDIC Warns Congress. WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation warned congress today that unless it gets new powers to prevent dissipation of bank capital it will have to increase eventually its present one-twelfth of 1 per cent assessment on deposits of insured banks.

The corporation said in its annual report: "The corporation believes that provision will have to be made for assumption of losses in excess of the present rate of assessment, unless deposit insurance is accomplished by supervisory action to prevent the dissipation of bank capital through excessive dividends without provision for losses, and by provision for relieving the banks of the necessity, to which they have been subjected in the past because of heavy withdrawals and inadequate rediscunt facilities, of liquidating assets at sacrifice values during periods of crisis."

GENERAL
Coughlin Attacks Elliott Roosevelt. DETROIT, July 16.—(UP)—The Rev. Charles Coughlin called Elliott Roosevelt a "defamer" in his sermon today and asked the Mutual Broadcasting System if it would "prove its worth, honesty and impartiality" by furnishing him time to answer a radio address by the son of the President.

By indirection Father Coughlin also criticized the entire family of President Roosevelt. Branching off from a remark about Elliott Roosevelt, he said:

"Does he know what he is talking about since he and his family have been on rather friendly terms with the Communists and since he is a high mogul in the broadcasting world?"

Father Coughlin has turned down dozens of offers to write syndicated articles for the newspapers and did not take advantage of his position, for personal gain as have others whom we need not mention."

He quoted Elliott Roosevelt as saying that "radio censorship might not be too high a price to pay if it will help insulate us against the anti-Semitic oratory of that radio priest." Then he continued:

"So free speech must be consigned to the political waste paper basket—all America must suffer—in order to muzzle Father Coughlin."

Man Races Car At Wall, Shoots Self To Get Even

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 16. (UP)—Failing to kill himself by racing his wife's new automobile down a steep hill and through a foot-thick cement wall, Eleondas Britton, 37-year-old shoe worker, ran into the house and mortally wounded himself with a rifle today.

"I told you I'd get even for not letting me use your car," he said to his wife, Adrienne, after the crash. A moment later she heard a shot and, investigating, found her husband on a closet floor, a bullet through his head.

A score of motorists were endangered as Britton's automobile roared 80 miles an hour down the main highway that leads to the Hampton Beach resort.

Police said Britton had placed two heavy boulders in the car's tonneau to hold it on the oad. The automobile was demolished by the impact, but Britton apparently escaped injury since a medical examiner could find no wounds except that made by the bullet.

TWO ARE ARRESTED
AS ROB SUSPECTS. $18.60 Taken From Forrest Avenue Lunch Stand.

Two negro suspects were arrested yesterday a short time after the operator of a lunch stand at Forrest avenue and Courtland street reported he was held up and robbed of $18.60.

The victim was Robert Bagwell. He told police two negroes, one armed with a pistol, entered the establishment and ordered him to hand over his money. The negroes then fled.

A few minutes later, Radio Patrolmen J. L. Carney and E. E. Nolan picked up, on Pine street, Andrew Williams, 24, and his brother, Clyde Williams, 22, both of the rear of 142 Merritts avenue, on charges of suspicion of robbery. Bagwell identified them as the men who entered his place, the radio officers reported.

Navy Divers Inspect Squalus. PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 16. (AP)—Hoping to descend to the sunken submarine Squalus tomorrow, navy divers made two preliminary trips below the surface today and reported two pontoons attached to the stern of the submersible were in good condition.

Undaunted by the wrecking of their carefully-laid plans when the bow of the submarine shot above the water Thursday, salvage workers spent virtually all day untangling hose lines.

Public Aid Asked In Mine Tragedy. PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 16.—(AP)—A plea for between $100,000 and $125,000 was made today to care for "destitute" families of 19 miners killed in an explosion in the Duvin soft coal mine as water and "bad air" hampered fresh rescue squad trying to reach nine others still trapped 280 feet below ground.

The plea for cash from a hastily organized Providence citizens' committee came on the announcement of F. V. Ruckman and D. J. Ruckman, principal mine owners, that the company is "hopelessly broke," unable to meet obligations to those whose husbands and fathers were killed.

J. L. Bradley, publisher of the Enterprise, Providence's weekly newspaper, and a member of the committee, said the mining company did not carry workmen's compensation insurance and "this means that their families will not receive anything although they are entitled under state law to $4,000 for the death of each miner."

THREE ARE HELD IN MAN'S BEATING

Probe Possibility of Rogers' Strike Trouble; Controversy Deadlocked.

The strike of employees of the Rogers and Big Star stores remained at a standstill yesterday. However, Radio Patrolman J. J. Elliott reported the arrest of three negroes on charges of "suspicion, hold for investigation" in connection with a beating which Samuel Harvey, 24, negro, of a Dunal street address, employed at a Rogers warehouse since last Friday, said was given him by four other negroes.

Harvey told police he was preparing to leave his home for work yesterday morning when the four negroes offered to drive him to his place of employment. Instead, he said, they drove him to University and McDaniel streets, where, Harvey said, he was stripped and beaten. He was treated at Grady hospital.

Those arrested by Patrolman Elliott gave their names as Fred Stillwell, 27; Jack Taylor, 28, and Tillman Rogers, 24.

B. H. Whitehead, representing Retail Clerks Local 1063, said last night the unions had not heard of any violence or the Harvey incident. He added that some clerks and butchers who worked Saturday would not work today.

Scott Allen, president of the Rogers stores, said, "Business was satisfactory Saturday, and stores will open Monday as usual. The company has nothing further to say at this time."

ATLANTA, GA., JULY 17, 1939.

Industrial Growth

The slowly growing volume of industrial development in the southeast forcefully demonstrates today the great need for a co-ordinating industrial council in Georgia, through which the energies of private interests and chambers of commerce could be concentrated.

The value of such a council would be incalculable. That it has not heretofore been established is rather surprising, and, in view of the future needs of Georgia, it is impossible to see why an organization of this kind should be further postponed.

Under present conditions, industrial promotion work within the state is carried out remarkably well by individual companies and by chambers of commerce. But there is a volume of overlapping effort, and of opportunities lost because of a lack of co-ordination and through lack of the facilities for research and survey only possible through a central organization.

The cost to private industries and chambers of commerce sharing in a co-ordinating council would be low, and yet repaid a thousandfold. In many instances, industries are lost to Georgia because of a lack of interest by the individual firm receiving the inquiry, or because of a lack of proper facilities for preparation of necessary surveys and reports. A co-ordinating council would enable interested firms to take over the inquiries from the disinterested company and would have available research facilities for the preparation of the necessary surveys.

Industrial development work is an extremely delicate task, success or failure oftentimes revolving around a minor detail. A well-established industrial council with a reputation for confidence-keeping and thoroughly familiar with the work, can serve the community and the state in such a manner the result will be the importation of millions of dollars in industrial construction now going to other states. When it is considered that each main industry construction obtained for Georgia will be followed by two or three associated industries, the results to be obtained by co-ordination of effort are easily demonstrable.

Authorities in the industrial field foresee a development for the south within the next 10 years of thousands of smaller industries that today are not contacted by private factors in the promotion field, and by chambers of commerce only incidentally. They foresee also a vast development of consumer industries and a decentralization of other manufacturing operations, a trend which even now can be easily discerned. And whether or not they are established in Georgia depends largely on the work of industrial development interests.

For example, there has not yet been a movement of industrial supply manufacturing plants into the south. One authority in the field estimates that less than one per cent of the textile machinery and supplies used in the south is made in this section. With the south becoming the greatest market for these items, it is inevitable they will be manufactured in the south.

And what is true of the textile industry is also true of other industries. Electrical goods, for example, are for the most part made in the north. The south will be, in years to come, the greatest market for this material and the raw products are available. So that the experience of one Atlanta company manufacturing goods of this type—doubled output over a period of only a few years—will be repeated a thousand times. Whether or not Georgia benefits will rest largely on intelligent promotion of Georgia's advantages, now conducted well, but haphazardly, by individual interests.

These individual interests are receptive to the establishment of a co-ordinating council for Georgia. The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce might well consider serving as the motivating influence for bringing together all Georgians interested in the development of the state's industries and in adding vitality to the movement for a balanced industrial expansion. It is only necessary that they be brought together, at a time never more propitious.

Anniversary at Panama

On August 15 Panama will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the opening of the Panama canal. A colorful program has been arranged for the event and undoubtedly many vacationists will arrange their itineraries to be present at that time.

The Panama canal, one of the half dozen vital waterways of the world, cost some $650,000,000 to construct, yet has paid for itself many times over in time saving, shortening of travel routes, convenience and, more than all else, in contributing to the better understanding and greater co-operation between nations.

The French spent some $300,000,000 on their abortive attempt to dig the canal, while the cost to the United States, which finally completed the project, was $350,000,000.

The dream of a canal to link the two oceans through the Americas' isthmus was born even during the days of Balboa, the first European to gaze upon the waters of the Pacific. Scores of plans were submitted, more than a dozen different routes were recommended and the right to construct such a canal was granted, time and again, to various private interests. All these, however, failed in the effort to raise sufficient capital and it was not until the project was tackled on a national basis that it became truly feasible.

No greater monument to the spirit of America stands anywhere, than the Panama canal. It represents years of consecrated labor and a spirit of determination to succeed, that would not know defeat.

In times of peace the Panama canal is one of the chief blessings ever bestowed upon a world of traders and travelers. In times of war, control of the canal would be vital to New World.

But As a Day—

Consider the patience of scientists. The astronomer, for example. A 15-year wait will be over for some of them next July 27, when Mars will approach within 36,030,000 miles of the earth, the nearest the planet will have been since 1924. At that time astronomers hope to learn whether the white cap which, as winter comes, appears first at the planet's south and then at its north pole, is composed of ice and snow. They say vapor should be rising from the cap and, with a spectograph, they may be able to discover what the cap is made of. The cap may be carbon dioxide, which would mean that the residents of Mars, if there are any, have a natural supply of the product we know on this planet as "dry ice."

Beside the wait for next July, astronomers at the Mount Wilson Observatory anticipate next December 17. That is the date when there will be another eclipse of a star which is ten million times larger than the sun. William H. Christie, of the observatory, operated by the Carnegie Institution, saw one eclipse before. He has waited nearly three years for another look.

At the new Palomar Observatory, Dr. Fritz Zwicky, one of the most important astronomers in the country, is still patiently watching the skies. He searched for two years with an 18-inch telescope to find eight super novae, large exploding stars. Now he is training his telescope skyward on a more difficult task—to find a super nova just after catastrophe has overtaken it. Astronomers also have an 11-year wait in store for another celestial manifestation; the sun is now passing the maximum of a sunspot cycle which told astronomers for the first time that eruptions near the spots cause fadeouts in short-wave radios.

The longest wait, however, is for Venus. The last passage of that planet between earth and the sun was in 1882. The next will be in 2004.

SMALL TOWNS AND BIG TOWNS.

(From the Montgomery Advertiser.)

It's nice to live in a quiet country town where you can do as you please without being molested by the law. Monday we saw two little girls riding their ponies on the sidewalk in front of the courthouse followed by another little girl on a bicycle. Foot passengers were most accommodating in letting the little girls go by, and threw in a smile to boot—Greenboro Watchman.

"It's nice to live in a quiet country town where you can do as you please without being molested by the law." And so it is, no doubt.

In smaller communities, as the late Ed Howe, of Kansas, was fond of remarking, gossip is the best of all possible policemen. It makes all but a fraction of the population walk decorously down the street called Strait, however unwillingly they may tread the said beaten path. In the smaller communities people are not afraid of the corner policeman, but they wisely stand in holy terror of the woman that lives at that corner and tells everything she knows or suspects.

In a big town peace officers naturally are more concerned with felonies than misdemeanors. They take a hand in misdemeanor cases only where the citizen's nuisance value reaches par on the curb market. In the bigger town gossip is quoted low, like fodder and last year's bird nests. In the big towns one may do as he pleases so long as he does not disturb anybody else, if he confines himself to misdemeanors. But in a small town the neighbors enjoy a compromising misdemeanor, especially if it is colorful, quite as much as they enjoy a felony, and they never fail to make the most of the free picnic.

The Advertiser only knows that the tyranny of the small town gossip is equal to that of Catfish Hitler. But the corner policeman is free to boss only the pariahs of the community. In the larger cities gossipers are quoted at three for a dime, whereas the corner cop is a tough egg—unless a penthouse wardheeler owns him. Small towners are no better at heart than big-towners, but they are bossed differently.

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

NEW DEAL AND PENSIONS WASHINGTON, July 16.—In Lauchlin Currie, the President has chosen a strong old age pension advocate as his most intimate economic adviser. Currie has lately taken the lead in fitting lavish old age pensions in the New Deal's spending philosophy, of which he is one of the most articulate exponents. Now that he has the President's ear, he may be expected to use all his persuasive power for concessions to the pension vote.

Such is the unnoticed but really striking aspect of the President's choice of executive assistants. The original prescription for these new members of the White House staff called for six "selfless" fellows with a "passion for anonymity." It remains to be seen how passionately anonymous they will be, but it seems almost certain that the six will constitute an important governmental innovation. In positions of such constant, confidential contact with the President, able men can wield great influence, and, judging by the first three named, the six will be able.

Besides Currie, the economist member, there is James Rowe, a brilliant younger New Dealer who will probably act as a liaison man, and William McReynolds, one of the few distinguished civil servants, who will handle administrative problems. As Rowe and Currie belong to the Corcoran-Cohen crowd, while McReynolds comes from the comparatively conservative treasury, the President as usual has preserved a semblance of balance between the two wings of his administration. Also as usual, however, the balance is only an outward seeming, for it is understood that a fourth place has been tentatively assigned to Lowell Mellett, head of the National Emergency Council and another New Dealer. As for the two places remaining, they have been offered to Thomas G. Corcoran and Benjamin V. Cohen, but, since the pair dislike any defined duties, the jobs are expected to be held open or filled by lesser men.

ALSO PAUL McNUTT In truth, the President is withdrawing himself more and more into the group of New Dealers with whom he feels most at ease. Meanwhile, the New Dealers are daily more tempted by the pension idea. The nature of the temptation, and the treasury's fear of a costly pension program have already been recorded. It may now be said pretty definitely that the New Dealers will yield to the temptation, and that, if they can carry the President along with them, a pension program will be presented to congress as soon as it convenes again next January.

The significance of Lauchlin Currie's installation among the selfless six is sufficiently obvious, therefore. Currie has already converted his former chief, Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the federal reserve board, who has publicly spoken for pensions. With Eccles, Currie and the other members of the New Deal group taking the pressure for pensions, it is formidable. It does not need a very daring prophet to predict that the new federal security administrator, Paul V. McNutt, will also join the pension push.

McNutt is no joiner of lost causes, and he will certainly not play in with the administration conservatives. He is not a man of principles so sturdy as to prevent him from doing the smart thing. And he will not only have old age pensions in his province; he also supercedes the chairman of the New Deal group, Arthur Altmeyer, who has clung obstinately to pensions on an actuarial basis, supported by a payroll tax. Indeed, the appointment of McNutt may influence pension policy almost as much as the appointment of Currie.

"NOTHING CAN STOP US" As newly ornamented with pensions, the New Deal spending philosophy suggests a Townsend plan shorn of such special features as the transactions tax. Of course, the New Dealers will not propose pensions of $200 a month, but even $60 pensions, without actuarial relationship to the payroll tax, will prove a heavy drain on the treasury. The argument for them is that there must be spending to keep the economic system going, and that, since congress is growing balky about "government investment," spending must take a form which has some political pressure behind it.

Not long ago, a powerful Townsendite, who is not in the movement for his health, remarked to your correspondents that "nothing can stop us, except the return of prosperity." Possibly the Townsendite was optimistic with regard to his own movement. It is easy to see, however, that, unless prosperity returns, pensions of some sort will be very hard to stop.

The Real News of Life.

Many years ago Sir James M. Barrie wrote a line in one of his books—I think it was in "A Window in Thrums," but am not quite sure—which has always seemed to me to sum up most of the philosophy of life.

"The hearse winds over the hill to the burying ground, but still there is a cry for the christening robe."

That was his line and, in this age of almost daily new alarms and when men's minds are constantly perplexed by the fundamental and poignant confusion, it is well to be that thought in mind.

So long as there is a cry for the christening, so long as motherhood comes to most of the women of the world and so long as love of home and family and the little babies, continuing, the fundamental of life and decency are secure.

Man may die by persecution, women may become innocent victims of modern war, sorrow and distress and death and agony may stalk over many places of the earth. But, even amid the ruins of life and death, babies will still smile and young mothers will still gaze with rapture upon their little ones. And, while thus the scheme of creation, the eternal seed of life exists, man knows that a day of perfect peace and infinite understanding is sure to come, eventually.

Love, Human and Divine.

It has been said innumerable times, but man can never contemplate too long the eternal truth that, through the emotion of human love, he comes closer to the divine than by any other luck provided by nature.

Human love and divine love are different, to be sure, but the one lifts man nearer to understanding of the Creator than any other factor in his being. It is through love that he catches the finest glimpse of God's divine care for His children.

Christ always emphasized the supreme importance of love in the earthy scheme of things, as well as in the divine. "And the greatest of these is love," remains the key text to all His teachings.

Thus, in sanctified love, sanctified in the hearts of those touched by the magic wand, is the supreme hope of mankind.

While a Chinese mother croons to her newborn babe, with the deep smile of abiding love for its father, it matters not that she crouches in some bomb-created shambles.

While simple German couples create homes and bend, hand in hand, over the cradle which holds their mutual pledge for the future, it matters not that Hitler dooms men to die.

While the refugee finds some forgotten shack where the miracle of birth may come to his beloved wife, there is complete assurance that a day will dawn when cruelly shall no longer drive people into the wilderness.

The Greatest Nazi Crime.

I know that the greatest crime committed in all the Nazi emanations is the crime against motherhood. By decree and by twisted logic, they have tried to make of their womanhood merely a machine for the production of future slaves to the state, robots of flesh and blood. They have offered financial reward to their unwed women, who will become mothers. They have taken from these women the eternal right to choose a mate and have said instead that the father-to-be must comply with conditions of blood and party affiliation. They would reduce their women to the level of the brood animal.

And by this same crime against God's divinest gift to man, human love, they add the capstone to their own doom. No such edifice as the one they would construct can long survive. For it is contrary to a law of God and God is the Creator of Nature herself.

Love, in the ultimate telling, must triumph. For that is the law of God, of Nature and of all mankind.

When Nazidom reviles the sanctity of human love, it reviles man's only pledge of divinity. It reduces him from a status a little lower than the angels, to a place below the animals.

You will note that Barrie's line says "a cry for the christening robe." Christening robes are indispensable only to a people with a knowledge of sacred things.

They need no christening robes for babies produced under the Nazi plan. A number is more sacred for them, than a name bestowed by love.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

THE ALLIANCE Obviously many friends did not read, or perhaps did not remember, the column some days ago in which I explained about registration for the Baptist World Alliance. I have had many requests in recent days to repeat this information, which I am glad to do this morning.

The official registration fee is $2.50, which is fixed by the Alliance, and which has been the amount paid at all previous congresses for full registration. When you pay the full registration fee, you get a green ticket, on which is printed "Admits you to all sessions—Auditorium and Ponce de Leon Park."

In addition to admission to all sessions, the green ticket entitles you to full membership in the congress with the right to vote. You receive a green envelope in which you will find the official badge, the official program, reports of the standing commissions, the official hymnbook, map of Atlanta with much valuable information about the city, the state and the south, a pencil and notebook.

Then there is a Ponce de Leon Park ticket, price one dollar, which gives you admission to all sessions at Ponce de Leon park Saturday and Sunday afternoons, and Saturday through Friday evenings. You also receive the badge which the Ponce de Leon park ticket entitles you to.

And you may buy single admission tickets for the Ponce de Leon park sessions, price 25 cents. If we find after Monday morning that

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

An Item NEW YORK, July 15.—On November 27, 1934, when Huey Long was at the height of his power and fighting the Standard Oil, the United Press carried a small item out of Baton Rouge which read as follows:

"The Win Or Lose Oil Company, sponsored by a group of Huey Long's followers, came into being Sunday, and preparations were made to begin drilling 50 wells on state property. For its share the state will receive one-eighth of the wells' production if it is found. The drilling, however, is in the center of the state's richest oil field."

"Charter has been granted by the state, showing capitalization at $10,000 and naming James A. Noe, Long's legislative leader, as president. Noe owns 98 per cent of the stock. Seymour Weiss, described as unofficial treasurer of the Long organization, is vice president, and Earl Christenberry, Long's secretary, is secretary of the oil company."

The Win Or Lose Oil Company appears to have prospered. Mr. Noe and Mr. Weiss each reported an income of $92,396 from Win Or Lose in 1935.

Present

Mr. Noe is one of the present candidates for the office of Governor, a job which he held briefly after the death of Oscar K. Allen, who was Huey's dummy during the dictatorship. He is an enemy of the present political machine and stoutly advocates good government and the abolition of graft. Within the last year a letter to him inquiring as to current profits of the Win Or Lose Company has received no answer. In a recent dispatch from Baton Rouge, Ray Daniel, of the New York Times, reported that Earl K. Long, the present Governor, Huey's brother, had demanded the resignation of the incumbent head of the minerals division of the state department of conservation and had appointed as his successor, Daniel McConnell. Mr. McConnell happens to be a brother of Mrs. Huey P. Long, and Mr. Daniel writes that Mrs. Long "is reputed to be the president of the Win Or Lose Company, which holds valuable gas leases."

Novelty

An intimate or vernal official in this job might overlook or tolerate irregularities in the industry, but the new Governor took counsel of his Maker and his conscience in assuming office. Thus it may be hoped, at least, that his selection of Mr. McConnell was prompted by the highest motives—which would be a novelty in Louisiana.

About the time Win Or Lose was chartered Huey Long, serving an ancient personal grudge against Standard Oil, which long ago had thwarted him of a fortune almost within his grasp, enacted a high tax on oil refined by Standard. Standard then threatened to close down and disemploy thousands of Louisiana voters who in this alarming situation turned their resentment on the Kingfish. This flurry of anger was in part responsible for a pathetic little ploy of his at Baton Rouge which Huey put down with the state militia. Among the repressive measures of those few days was an order reading as follows:

"Publication, either by newspapers, handbills, pamphlets or otherwise, of any statement on the state or its officers or tending to influence the public mind against the state or its officers will not be permitted." This included the state conservation department and the officers of Win Or Lose.

Nevertheless, Huey backed down. He explained that his intention was to promote the prosperity of the Louisiana oil industry, which, incidentally, included Win Or Lose, and agreed to waive 80 per cent of the tax on Louisiana oil refined by Standard.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS Not long ago a gentleman came into the office in a frame of mind which was indicated by the choleric color of his face.

"Till tell you this about old-age pensions," he said. "They are not at all impracticable. They are just impossible. Impossible or not, the pension remains as a casus belli in politics. You will find old-age pensions at the base of almost every trouble the lawmakers are having in the various states. They have discovered that it was easy to promise much when running for office but that paying the pensions is another matter. Quite another matter."

Now comes Georgia's Braswell Deen, who calls attention to senate amendment which, if passed, will really bring the matter of old-age pensions into the political picture even more emphatically than they are today.

The amendment provides states must pay as much as $10 per month to be matched with federal funds. Georgia is paying a bit more than $4 and the federal government has been matching this sum, thus providing about $10 each month to those on the rolls. If the senate amendment is adopted it will mean that Georgia must abandon old-age pensions altogether or reduce those on the rolls to a very modest number. If it is adopted it will bring disunity and discontent to dozens of states and will intensify the demand for the pensions.

It is just possible that if the amendment is passed it will be the last straw which breaks the camel's back of opposition to a revision of the tax structure in Georgia.

THEY ARE IMPOSSIBLE Adequate old-age pensions in Georgia are impossible under the present system. It is entirely possible the state cannot pay them.

In a release to the members of the Georgia legislature or Saturday, Roy V. Harris, speaker of the house of representatives concluded his discussion of the financial situation, as follows:

1. If the economy committee's recommendations as to appropriations are adopted, and if the counties are not repaid their losses, and if the appropriations to the school fund and for assistance to the aged, blind and dependent children are left at the present amounts, the general treasury will need $3,460,910.41 additional money each year.

2. If the economy committee's recommendations as to appropriations are adopted, and if the counties are not repaid, and if the common school appropriation is fixed at $10,110,000, and if the appropriation for old age assistance, etc., is left at the present figure, the general treasury will need $5,004,850.41 additional money each year.

3. If the economy committee's recommendations as to appropriations are adopted, and if the counties are repaid, and if the appropriations to the common school fund and for assistance to the aged blind, etc., are left at present figures, the general treasury will need $5,260,010.41 new revenue each year.

4. If the economy committee's recommendations as to appropriations are adopted, and if the counties are repaid their losses, and if the appropriations for old age assistance are left at the present figure, and if the common school appropriation is fixed at $10,110,000, the general treasury will need $6,804,850.41 new revenue each year.

5. If the school teachers are to be paid the amount the state is now due them, it will require an additional expenditure of approximately $4,000,000.

Speaker Harris estimates that if the recommendations of the economy committee are adopted; if the counties are repaid; if the schools are given the figure they say is absolutely necessary, and if the payments to the aged are left as they are today, the state will need $6,804,850 new revenue each year. Also he finds that if the teachers are to be paid their back salaries an additional $4,000,000 will be needed.

Matching federal funds has led many states to the rim of bankruptcy in WPA, PWA and other projects. If old-age assistance increases in cost there will be a breakdown of the system or a large increase in taxation.

THE GREATEST NEED Obviously, the greatest dependents of the state are its young and its old. Child welfare ought to be a very real and sincere department of state. So ought old-age assistance. Neither group can help itself.

When the poet wrote: "Grow old along with me, the best of life is yet to be," he did not include those old who are left dependent on charity. It is a positive fact that many old people are neglected and uncared for by those who could if they desired. This is a good world but there are in it many who are selfish and heartless and who find the aged members of their families a burden and a care.

Most any doctor who has been in general practice for any length of time has encountered families who resented the doctor's efforts to bring back to life some old person who was about to pass on.

There is a duty there. It is not entirely seen in all the political turmoil; it is not conceived in its proper aspect because of the financial woes of the states and the protest of the people against more taxes.

The needs of the old—and they all can vote—is a very real political force. The harassed state politician will view the senate amendment with genuine alarm. If it passes, the state of Georgia will find increased pressure on demand for an entire revision of the tax structure with a view to meeting the real needs.

Carpenters Are Jobless Where People Stop Building, But They Won't Be Idle Forever

When the Cherokee Strip was opened, and the last robbery of poor Lo was finished, men eager for land and fortune raced one another for their future homes. Some hundreds stopped to lay the foundations of Tulsa, and a tent city appeared as if by magic before another nightfall.

Soon canvas gave way to permanent structures of lumber and brick and stone, and the air vibrated with that most cheering of all sounds, the whining rasp of saws and the tattoo of hammers driving nails. Everybody hurried. Everybody seemed to be buying, selling, hauling, working, serving one another. There was a boom.

What made the boom? There was no oil yet. There was only good farm land, not yet under the plow; and many another section, with equally good land, had no boom.

There was a boom at Tulsa because many people, with cash and distant credit, were spending their money—inventing it in homes and business houses and various undertakings in the hope of future profit.

Baptist Preachers and Laymen To Camp Out at Lakewood Park

Arkansans Will Travel by Truck to World Alliance; 'Willing To Rough It To Attend Great Meeting,' Leader Says.

They'll be tenting at Lakewood park—A group of 36 Baptist preachers and other churchmen from the northeast corner of Arkansas will pitch tents and camp out for a week in the park in connection with the Baptist World Alliance, it was learned last night.

Colonel B. L. Bugg, housing chairman of the convention informed them they would have access to water, lights, baths, could cook their own food—and still be within three miles of the main assembly hall of the meeting.

The camping-out party's trip was arranged by Dr. W. O. Taylor, of Corns Ark., who said the group will come here by truck, estimating the trip would cost not more than $15 each.

"Our party is enthusiastic over the trip," he said. "Most of them are farmers. All of us are poor people and willing to rough it for the privilege of attending that great meeting."

FUTURE FARMERS TURN ACTORS FOR MOVIE AT ATHENS

A hundred Georgia farm boys have turned movie actors.

The youths, all members of Future Farmer organizations in this state, are appearing before the camera in a film dramatization of a novel written several years ago by Dean Paul Chapman, of the University of Georgia agriculture school.

The work is "The Green Hand," and production is now in progress on the campus of the University of Georgia, where many of the principal scenes were laid. Other scenes will be "shot" on the Georgia coast.

The film contains an all-southern cast. Besides the Future Farmers, "actors" include M. D. Mobley, state director of vocational education.

The picture is being filmed by the Venard Production Company, of Peoria, Ill., and is being underwritten by the Sears-Roebuck Education Foundation.

Duke's Homer in Nightcap Gives Crackers Tavin Bill, 54, 42

All in the Game

by Jack Troy

On the basis of what he showed late last season and the stuff he displayed in spring training and in the exhibition season, Pete Stein had been tabbed by observers and fans as probably the Crackers' most promising rookie pitcher.

It was the general consensus of opinion that he had as much stuff as anybody. Then the season started and Stein couldn't win.

One by one the rookie pitchers faltered and were cut off the roster and Stein stayed. His pitching probably didn't justify it but Manager Paul Richards had a certain faith in him.

Saturday Pete Stein justified that faith. He pitched a neat six-hitter against the slugging Smokies, never was in serious trouble. So Pete Stein may now go on to uphold the prediction of observers and fans.

For, you see, he does have as much stuff as any Cracker pitcher. His main drawback was lack of confidence in himself. Where others had confidence in him, he lacked confidence in himself.

That Saturday game really should mark the turning point. He wobbled once or twice, but never once allowed the slugging Smokies to work up a sustained attack.

And, as he went alone in the ninth in a tight ball game, he got better. The old confidence returned to him to such an extent that for the last four innings, only two Smokies got on base. Stein walked two batters, but they never advanced past first base.

One may be wrong in thinking Stein is out of it now and will win consistently in the future. But the signs all point that way. And it is a happy prospect. For Larry Miller is due to be back on the firing line soon and with Stein winning and Miller back, the hurling corps will be in excellent shape.

Nothing could do a young pitcher's morale more good than handcuffing the Smokies. For whatever else they may lack, they certainly can overpower that baseball.

THE DOC HIMSELF.

Usually when something or someone develops in sports, the phrase "just what the doctor ordered" is brought into play.

On the Cracker side, however, it happens that the Doc came in person. And he certainly has proved to be what Messrs. Earl Mann and Paul Richards ordered.

Young Doc Smith is not only the best rookie catcher in the league, but he ranks right along with the best class catchers. No catcher has a better throwing arm, for instance.

Would-be base stealers are just asking for it. eight times out of ten, when they take liberties with that shotgun he uses for an arm.

Gabho Gabler was talking about Doc the other day. "Say-y-y-y," he said, "that young feller sure has got a lot of nepper. You throw a strike in there and he bounces up saying, 'Attaboy, that's pitching,' and fires that ball back and almost knocks you down with it."

In addition, young Doc can hit. He's catching now a bit ahead of time. He was being held out of the lineup because of an injured leg, but when Manager Paul Richards suffered a leg infection, Doc cheerfully returned to duty.

It's a bit tough on him back of the plate and running out hits, because the leg still bothers him, but unless you knew he was hurt you'd think he was a slow runner.

A knee injury suffered in sliding at Waycross robbed the Crackers of Dewey Williams, a first-rate young catcher with a strong arm and a good eye, but Doc Smith has proved a worthy replacement. Just think how well off the Crackers will be with the two of them next season.

AS TO GABLER.

Atlanta fans must realize by now that the Crackers have the canniest direction of any team in the Southern league. As a matter of fact, President Earl Mann often has been sought by the majors. The same is true of Manager Paul Richards.

Anyway, it's a dime to a dollar that no one thought Frank Gabler, coming from last-place St. Paul, could help Atlanta. Frankly this corner doubted it.

And yet Gabler, who hadn't started a ball game in a year, is a winner. And in the crucial point of an important series, he comes up with a hit in the role of pinch-hitter to win for another pitcher.

I think something was said to the effect that "one will have to take Richards word that Gabler can help the Crackers." Well, Richards' word is pretty good, isn't it?

POINDEXTER AND DUKE.

Some disposition had to be made of Jack Bolling and yet there was some question about taking Jennings PoinDEXTER in the deal. He hadn't been used much by the last-place Phillies and it was a well-known fact he had been Doc Prothro's pride and joy at Little Rock. It wasn't easy to understand why Doc wasn't using him at Philadelphia.

Anyway, PoinDEXTER came on down and has come through. He is just what "Doctor" Mann ordered. PoinDEXTER has been a big help to a once-shaky Cracker staff.

Then Willie Duke wasn't helping New Orleans much. And that was a similar case. Neither was Fritz Oetting helping Atlanta. The trade, with cash thrown in, was effected, and Duke immediately proved the league sensation. You just can't get around it; it was a case of smart dealing all the way around.

Ferdinand's Corner: Some do and some don't: Much of Paul Richards' success with pitchers is due to the fact that he gets and keeps them in shape. . . . They run more than any nitchers to keep their legs in shape. . . . Gabler could win for St. Paul and PoinDEXTER still could help Doc Prothro. . . . Sam Moore, of Crawfordville, who was a great amateur player in his day, Saturday saw his first professional game at Ponce de Leon park. . . . Moore is now dealing in cattle and produce. . . . That "Cavalcade of Baseball" the Crackers will present the night of August 17th is a colorful affair. . . . Red Pittman is taking time out from baseball because of a strained leg muscle and is playing golf to stay in condition. . . . Stanton staged one of the most colorful of invitation tournaments, that of Dr. Julius Hughes, Atlanta champion, taking the title. . . . Elmer Ray and Leroy Haynes are expected to engage in a ding-dong battle to-night at Ponce de Leon park. . . . Everything is peaches down at Thomaston. . . . And what peaches! . . . Judge Bob Carpenter made a wise choice in not trying to qualify for the two-club tournament. . . . He might have landed in the ninth flight, and that would have been too bad. . . . Ferdinand and the judge once played 21 holes at Candler. . . . He won, one up. . . . T. L. Johnson is watching baseball these days, but football is on his mind. . . . Ditto for Roy Mundorff, Tech, except his mind is on basketball with the annual clinic in the offing. . . . It shocked Stuart Stephenson, president of the Southeastern league, to discover Alabama had no building or exhibits at the World's Fair. . . . It was one of the few states missing. . . . The Georgia build-

BARNES DEFEAT YATES BOYS, 1 UP IN GOOD MATCH

Charlie Leads Scorers With 71 Before Big Gal- lery at East Lake

By 'OY WHITE.

Tommy and Luke Barnes won a one-up victory over Charlie and Alan Yates Sunday afternoon on the No. 1 East Lake course in a "brothers" benefit exhibition. A large crowd saw some fine golf and did their share towards sending Atlanta's municipal team to the national public links tournament at Baltimore, Md., later this month.

Only five of the 18 holes were won, with the Barneses winning three and losing two.

Charlie had the best score, a 35-36-71, with Luke Barnes, a member of the Atlanta team in the national, only a stroke back in second place. Tommy Barnes had a 75, while Alan Yates with a fine recovery on the back nine after a 40 on the front side, was only a stroke back of Tommy with a 76.

After halving five straight holes, Charlie Yates got a birdie two on the island for a one-up advantage. Tommy Barnes had a birdie three at seven, and the match was all square again.

Luke played two great wood shots to the green at nine. He sent a 20-foot putt straight for the cup, but the ball hit the cup and bounced out for a "gimme" birdie and a one-up advantage for the Barneses. Charlie and Alan rimmed the cup and hung on the lip.

Tommy had to sink a long putt at 17 to halve the hole, after both teams had played sensationally on the 16th for another half.

Both Tommy and Luke had fine drives over the lake to 18 and won the match with two pars as both Alan and Charlie took four's.

WEEP FOR LOVE

Roy Selby Drives Elizabeth To Their Place In Somerset For a Holiday

By RUBY M. AYRES.

Synopsis to preceding instalments:

When Derek Challoner's wife dies, the staid English landowner, whose marriage had been the result of a family understanding, is glad of his freedom and vows he will never marry again. Then he sees dainty Stella Dawson playing a small part in a suburban theater and is an ardent suitor. She marries him. Imposing Narrow Lane Hall depresses her but he ignores her request to live in his small house in London. She is happy when her baby is born until the Challoner tradition puts little Elizabeth in charge of the house, then governess. After seven unhappy years she welcomes the open adoption of impetuous Pip Hubbard. When divorce threatens Stella pleads with Derek for Betty. He refuses and after her mother marries Pip, Betty becomes very ill and Derek's doctor says she will die if not permitted to go to her mother. When Elizabeth is 16 Pip is killed in an accident and Stella is inconsolable. While on a bus trip a year later, Elizabeth meets Kim Lawless whose word she invoked to pick primroses despite a warning to trespassers. She likes him and he says he hopes she comes again. Derek dies, leaving Elizabeth half his wealth if she leaves Stella and lives with her Aunt Thornley. Her stepmother Penelope brings this news and can't understand her decision to remain with her mother. Penelope tells her she was engaged to marry Kim Lawless and Elizabeth lives with Aunt Thornley. At the Selby dance she meets Lawless. He asks if she doesn't think it right to break an engagement when it's a mistake. Now go on with the story:

INSTALLMENT IX.

And then she seemed to see again Kim Lawless' tall figure standing between her and the light and to hear his blunt question, "Does it make any difference?"

And although she had not been able to answer it then, now in her heart she answered it passionately: "I hope it won't—oh, I hope it won't!"

Penelope left for her holiday in Italy while Elizabeth was still at home. "Such a queer, unaffectionate girl," Miss Thornley said when she had gone.

Miss Thornley had decided to spend a holiday in Harrogate. She had offered to take Elizabeth with her, but the Selby's invitation had come as a relief, for though she was firm in her determination to do her duty to the end, she much preferred her own company.

"Have you all your clothes, you will need?" she asked. "Plenty of tweeds and washing frocks—for those are what you will wear most often in the country. And about trains—"

Elizabeth said a little shyly that Roy Selby had offered to drive her down.

"If you don't mind," she added. "Mind?" Miss Thornley looked mildly astonished. "Why should I mind? I like Roy Selby. And then, to Elizabeth's amazement, she spoke of Kim Lawless. "Was he at the dance the other night?"

"Yes."

"I thought so," Miss Thornley looked complacent. "That's why Penelope refused to go. I suppose what did you think of him, Elizabeth?"

"I danced with him only once," Elizabeth answered.

"Well, Miss Thornley sighed, "I always liked him, whatever his faults may have been. I don't know the truth about his engagement to Penelope and I have never asked any questions, but I think that she was probably to blame. Still, it's over and done with. It seems a pity, but, well—Penelope has her career. Let us hope that that will not be another disappointment."

"I think her voice is beautiful," Elizabeth said warmly.

"Many people have beautiful voices," her aunt answered. "But it needs more than that—it needs the touch of genius to bring fame; it needs personality, too—all the great singers have had personality, and sympathy, but Penelope seems to be a little hard, or that may be just a pose. One can never tell."

So Roy Selby duly called for Elizabeth, and they drove away together.

"It's a bit out of the way," he told her. "But it's the prettiest route, and there's no hurry. Mother and the rest of the family went down yesterday, and Lawless comes tomorrow."

He glanced down at her, thinking how beautiful she was, wondering whether she could ever—some day—learn to care for him.

He had always been inclined to laugh at sentiment and at other fellows who fell in love and "mooned about" after a girl; but now it was his turn, and he felt a little ashamed of the merciless way he had chaffed his friends and led them up to ridicule.

Elizabeth was so sweet. Even to his unpoetical mind she was like a delicate flower which one only longed to protect and was half afraid to touch.

But his ineloquence could find nothing better to say than: "It's ripping to think we shall be together for the next fortnight. I hope you'll like the house. It's a queer, old-fashioned place. It's supposed to have a family ghost, too. People say they've seen her pet spook wandering about the corridors—at midnight, of course."

"A woman?" Elizabeth asked, her eyes wide open with interest. But Roy shook his head.

"No, it's a dog. But it's only supposed to appear when someone in the house is about to meet with tragedy or make a lifelong mistake or some such tosh."

He laughed, but Elizabeth said seriously.

"A dog! I think that's rather beautiful, because dogs are such understanding creatures."

Roy had spoken truthfully when he described the house as an old-fashioned place.

"It looks older than Narrow Lane Hall," Elizabeth said when they turned into the drive. "But not so big," she added, eagerly scanning the rugged face of the house, with its tall, knotted chimneys and crooked gables.

"No wonder it's called High Chimneys," she said.

"Supposed to be Elizabethan," Roy answered carelessly. "The inside is old enough, anyway—two stairs up and two stairs down in most unexpected places. And there's a secret room—only everyone knows where it is—and the ghost."

"What do they call the ghost?" she asked interestedly.

He shook his head. "I suppose it has a name once," he admitted. "But Barbara and I have christened it 'Bingo.' I don't know why."

Elizabeth laughed. "Poor Bingo!" she said.

Roy rounded the last bend of the drive in fine style and stopped at the front door.

His sister Barbara came running out to meet them.

"I quite expected her to turn you out into the ditch or something," she informed Elizabeth. "He's so frightfully reckless."

"Reckless yourself!" her brother retorted disgustedly. "Has Lawless come?"

"Not yet. And I'm not at all sure that he will come."

Roy stared at her.

"What on earth do you mean?" Barbara shrugged her shoulders. "Nothing, except—well, at the dance the other night I thought he didn't seem keen about it. You know how people behave when they're trying to hedge politely."

Roy laughed.

"Rot! He'll come," he said confidently. "You're always imagining things. Hello, mother!"

Mrs. Selby bent to kiss Elizabeth.

"I am delighted to see you," she said, and she drew the girl's hand through her arm. "Did you have a good run down? Did Roy drive carefully? But I'm sure he did."

"I'll take you to your room," Barbara volunteered. "I hope you'll be able to find your way about this old barn. Has Roy told you about Bingo?" she asked laughingly.

"I believe it's just a fable," Barbara declared. "At any rate, we've never seen him. This way—down these two steps. I hope you'll like your room; it looks over the garden. By the way, may I call you Elizabeth?"

"Please."

"And you call me Barbara. I hate formality. Here we are."

She crossed the room with its low-raftered ceiling and pushed the window wide.

"It's a topping view," she said, with careless pride. "It's a bit misty now—heat, I suppose—but when it's clear you can see the hills—and a bit of the sea."

She was so bright and friendly that Elizabeth's heart warmed toward her as, for a moment, they stood together looking out over the old walled garden, with its beds of flaming flowers and mossy lawns.

Suddenly Barbara gave a little squeal.

"There's Kim—oh, I am glad he's come, after all!" She leaned out of the window and called to him shrilly.

Lawless, who had just stopped his car at the door, looked up and smiled; but Elizabeth drew back a little with a sudden unaccountable feeling of shyness.

"I'm so glad he's come," Barbara said again joyfully. "He's such a lamb. I was dead nuts on him when I was in the nursery, and I've never got over it."

She glanced at Elizabeth. "Of course, she was ages before he knew your sister," she apologized. "I can't understand why she chucked him."

"I don't know anything about it," Elizabeth said.

Barbara shrugged her shoulders. "Neither do I. Kim never talks about her, of course, but she always seemed so frightfully happy when she was with him—not that I saw them together very much."

Poor Penelope! Elizabeth thought again, but she made no comment as they went downstairs together.

"Tea outside under the old apple tree," Roy informed them gaily. He gave his sister a little dig. "Who said Lawless wasn't coming?" he scoffed, raising his voice to call his friend.

Lawless shook hands with Elizabeth. "What do you think of High Chimneys?" he asked.

"I think it's beautiful."

"I think old places are a bit depressing myself," Barbara said cheerfully, "but I expect you'll love it."

"Why should she love it?" Roy asked.

Barbara laughed.

"Well, she looks a bit romantic," she answered. "There's a sort of fairy princess air about her. She waved a hand in vague explanation. 'I'm sure she adores the Knights of the Round Table and all that, don't you, Elizabeth?'"

Elizabeth flushed a little.

"Yes, I like the Knights of the Round Table."

"Lancelot the Unfaithful?" Lawless asked with a faint smile, but it was Barbara who answered calmly:

"I don't see how you could expect him to be anything else—entirely surrounded by lovely ladies as he was." She flung herself into a dramatic attitude, with outflung arms. "To love or maiden only, clinging to her and worshiping her with years of faithful love," she quoted. "It sounds a bit dull to me."

"Really, Barbara," her mother murmured.

Some Widows Find Deadheading Husbands Profitable Investments.

Is Non-Supporting Mate Antidote For Loneliness?

By Caroline Chatfield.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD: I was a widow with a home, a comfortable living for myself and my children, when along came a man who seemed to be everything a woman could wish. He gave me lovely gifts, was sweet with the children, remembered their birthdays and took them on picnics. Naturally I fell for this and married him. Then he changed completely. He would look me blankly in the eye and say "If I had any money it would be yours—but I haven't any." Not a cent for groceries, much less for servant help, clothes or amusement.

He lived at our home without paying a cent toward insurance and taxes, ate three meals a day our money had provided and took no responsibility for anything. Sick with worry and disappointment, I finally divorced him. Now the children are all married and gone and he wants me to take him back. If I weren't so fearfully lonely I wouldn't hear him but sometimes I think I'd rather be dead than live alone with nobody to talk to day or night. What is a lonely widow to do?

L. W.

ANSWER:

She's to spend her money for the thing that will give her most pleasure and if supporting a non-account husband is her idea of a good investment there's no reason why she shouldn't take him on, provided she doesn't hazard her children's inheritance. Frankly I'd think the same amount of money spent in making and entertaining friends, in travel, in seeing the world and learning something about it, would provide more pleasure and would be a better antidote for loneliness.

A business woman who employs a large number of young women and manages to be a friend and counselor to them says that she used to warn a candidate for second marriage against marrying the same sort of man she divorced but soon learned she was wasting her breath. "It's a strange thing," she said, "that nine times out of ten a young divorcee will pick a second husband similar to the first one and cannot see that all her marriage problems are going to be similar. I'm not sure whether it's her unconscious effort to live over the first happy experience or that she's a poor judge of men."

Lady, loneliness is a terrible affliction. So is a deadheading husband. A widow who has sampled both should know which is worse.

excuse for shameful self-indulgence or, if the wishy-washy one really means it, the idea betrays childish ignorance of nutrition.

People who look and feel trim and fit do not go on diets; they adopt a reasonable, nutritionally adequate regimen and stay on it, as you and I brush our teeth or roll our morning somersaults respectively. Not that sensible folk never escape the monotony of right eating. Even you and I make little to-do, I hope, if we have to worry along for a while without our respective foibles.

The Corrective Protective Diet as printed in this column a few months ago, is not only corrective and protective in the sense that it restores some of the vitamins and minerals lacking in the everyday diet of most people and adjusts the overbalance of refined carbohydrate material in the everyday diet. It is at the same time a basic, fundamental or model health diet for mature adults—not for children or adolescents. It is a term your diet upon the Corrective Diet you will have what may fairly be called a regeneration or rejuvenation diet, and without much special knowledge of caloric values of food materials can readily make it a maintenance diet, a reduction diet, or a fattening diet.

A maintenance diet is one that provides sufficient calories in the form of fat, protein and carbohydrate in fair proportions to yield the energy required to perform the muscular work or play the individual does daily, besides the minimum energy required to carry on the vital functions (this averages 1,800 calories daily), and the material necessary for growth and repair of wear and tear, plus a certain minimum necessary to maintain normal body temperature. Such a diet represents 2,500 to 3,000 calories, to keep an adult of average height and size at normal weight. If the maintenance diet is supplemented with the main vitamins (B-complex and D) it will not only maintain normal weight but also excellent health. Please bear in mind, this is a maintenance diet only for a sedentary adult. It is not adequate for a person under 25 years of age, nor is it sufficient for a mature adult who works or plays hard.

Early Furniture Was Artistic, Spectacular

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

For us moderns, the story of furniture really begins with the Renaissance, and from then on everything that happened in the world matters definitely to home-makers today because it was reflected in furniture and decorative arts that influence life in our time. In fact, about the easiest and most interesting way to get a history straight is to learn it in terms of furniture. But before embarking on a detailed account from this time on, better get the sequence in mind—remembering that most of the furniture you see in the stores today is reproduced after styles developed directly because the course of history ran as it did.

A CREATIVE IMPETUS.

The Renaissance roughly covers the period from 1400 to 1650. And it began with a change in currents of thought so compelling that they resulted in a flashing burst of enterprise and in a suddenly awakened appreciation of classic art and learning. The momentum of thought that came out of the Renaissance is still a creative impetus to this day—for we are continuously going back to these stirring centuries for decorative designs and inspiration. The Renaissance may be said to have been born in Italy and throughout the period Italy was the first source of inspiration. From Italy this creative impetus flowed into France, England, the Netherlands and Spain, all of whom drank deeply from its abundant spring of imagination and vigor.

As the actual Renaissance faded, the creative center shifted to France where for nearly 200 brilliant years, climaxed in the period of the Louis, a wealth of beautiful and imaginative things tripped from the artistic fingers of French craftsmen. Another force entered the scene during this period—the navigators who had been venturing into the Orient had made possible regular trade routes to the Far East, and ships laden with the intricate lovely things from China were pouring into Europe and stimulating the efforts of designers and artisans.

UNIVERSAL APPEAL.

The English were somewhat long-end bow of real ribbon—and yes, there's the parasol which royalty recently threatened to bring back to modern day American use.

This little old-fashioned lady stands on a throne of gold—just as did the dear ladies of grandmother's day—the era of which she reminds us—and upon her head there's a crown of gold which, removed, sends, to nostrils roundabout, the delicate, altogether lovely perfume of old-fashioned garden flowers—remindful of those that bordered the garden at grandmother's house. It's not too heavy and not too sweet, but "just right."

Of course this dear little lady is much too precious to be touched by unadorned hands, so there is over her a glass shield.

This is about the loveliest package—and the most different—I've even seen, and you wouldn't believe it could be bought for only a dollar. But if you'll phone me I'll tell you the name, and where it may be purchased. Or if you don't live in Atlanta, write me, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Forcing Declarer To Ruff, Good Defensive Strategy

By Harold Sharpsteen.

Generally speaking, it is considered good defensive strategy, against adverse suit contracts, to throw the lead into declarer's hand when ever it is possible to do so . . . and the best way to accomplish this is to force declarer to ruff.

If declarer is ever to lose control of the hand, it will occur after his trump holdings are exhausted.

HURRIES DECLARER.
Even if it gains very little, forcing declarer seldom loses anything for the defensive side. It always tends to hurry declarer's game and many times upsets well-laid plans.

The greatest mistake of the average beginner, who attempts to follow this general idea of forcing declarer, is made by leading a suit which declarer may ruff in either hand. Such a lead is decidedly a losing play for defense.

more slowly and less spectacularly evolving their own style of furniture that was to flower into eighteenth century masterpieces, which probably represent the most consummate perfection in furniture achievement. It has a simpler more dignified character that is curiously universal in its appeal.

The early nineteenth century saw the development of Napoleonic furniture in France, which went back to ancient Egypt, Pompeii, Herculaneum, Rome and Athens for decorative detail and structural forms. This was reflected in America in the work of Duncan Phyfe and the so-called American Empire, in Germany in Biedermeier and in England in Regency. Following this came the carved and curving Victorian styles.

The twentieth century has developed the so-called modern or functional furniture which eliminates all ornaments and reflects a type of construction adapted to mass production methods—with the Scandinavian and Germanic countries probably leading in creative design contributions.

Every woman has a secret self or thinks she has, but it is tiresome to others when she feels the urge to reveal her inmost thoughts and feelings.

"G. W. T. W." Runs Five Hours

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, July 16.—"Shadows on the Snow" is the attractive title of the Sonja Henie picture, based on the original completed by S. S. Van Dine shortly before his death. It will follow "Everything Happens at Night," which goes into production when Sonja returns from her vacation in Norway. . . . Jock Whitney is spending a week in Hollywood to look at the present cut of "Gone With the Wind." It will be interesting to see how long the picture is in its final version. At present it runs five hours. . . . George Brent is still sick, and the two days needed to complete "The Rains Came" have been scheduled for the end of July. . . . Talking about sickness—Dennis O'Keefe is taking longer than expected to recover from his auto accident, and his place in "Henry Goes to Arizona" goes to George Murphy.

Sam Goldwyn is said to be taking up where Warners left off in the plan to make a picture on the life of the late John D. Rockefeller, with George Arliss doing the impersonation. . . . George Stevens will direct the Carole Lombard-Brian Aherne opus, "Vigil in the Night," which gets the starting gun July 20. . . . James Ellison makes love to Anne Shirley in "Anne of the Windy Poplars." . . . Universal will film two of Sinclair Lewis' works—"Prodigal Parents" and an untitled original he is now authoring.

Joe Penner's next for RKO-Radio, "Glamor Boy Number 2," . . . which reminds me, this studio is planning its all-time high budget for "Hunchback of Notre Dame." The current cost is put at two and a half to three million dollars! They are doing you proud, Mr. Laughton. . . . Next for Clark Gable on the Metro roster—"Spur of Pride," with Myrna Loy. The picture starts after Myrna finishes the "Thin Man" with William Powell. . . . Al Jolson continues his screen comeback with "Swanee River," with Don Ameche as director, by Sidney Lanfield. . . . "The Farmer's Daughter" is the promising title for Martha Raye's forthcoming picture for Paramount.

Joel McCrea gets Patricia Morrissey, "Glamor Boy Number 2," . . . which reminds me, this studio is planning its all-time high budget for "Hunchback of Notre Dame." The current cost is put at two and a half to three million dollars! They are doing you proud, Mr. Laughton. . . . Next for Clark Gable on the Metro roster—"Spur of Pride," with Myrna Loy. "The Farmer's Daughter" is the promising title for Martha Raye's forthcoming picture for Paramount.

By a strange oversight, Paramount is one of the few major studios without a theater outlet in Hollywood. To see a first-run Paramount picture, one has to go the 12 miles to Los Angeles. But this inconvenience is about to be remedied with the pending purchase of the Hollywood playhouse, now used by little theater groups and for radio shows. . . . Metro's Jack Chertok will produce a short titled "Sob Sister," which makes me vaguely apprehensive.

The great-grandson of one of the greatest, if not the greatest, stars in the business has been signed to a Hollywood contract. He will be doing well if he does half as well as his great grandire. The name in both cases is Rin Tin Tin. The canine cavorts in "Hollywood Cavalcade." . . . Bette Davis and John Garfield have been teamed for "We Shall Meet Again." . . . Ann Sheridan draws John Payne and Dennis Morgan for "Escort Girl." . . . A budget of $1,500,000 has been allotted for the Mae West-W. C. Fields western. Most of it is for salaries for the two stars.

My Day: Money Set Aside to Aid Women Inmates of Prison

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK.—Someone has sent me a page from a letter contest carried on by a Chicago newspaper. The winning letter in answer to the question: "Who is it in this world you would most like to know?" is a letter which sets forth the reasons why Ghandi is the person, above all others, the writer would like to become acquainted with. Ghandi has been given by his followers the name "Mahatma," which means "great soul." I think that it is rather fine that, in our materialistic country, someone should be moved to recognize in him a personality, they would like to know above all others.

May G. Schaefer, president of the Soroptimist Club of Alhambra, Cal., writes me that they have become very much interested in the California Institution for Women at Tehachapi. Two years ago they set aside a small sum of money to be disbursed for the discharged women prisoners under the personal direction of the state parole officer. She tells me that this fund was not expected to be a revolving fund, but that it is working out that way. The sums given are usually very small, to meet such small needs as a new hat, a night's lodging, or a dress to be cleaned, and so far the women have almost always looked upon the sums given them as loans and returned them as soon as possible.

This is interesting, for it shows a feeling of responsibility on their part for other women in similar circumstances and a desire to give those women the same chance which they, themselves have had.

In addition, the club feels that "much of crime is due to economic maladjustment. We felt that developing of new fields of work, new interests behind prison walls, would make these women fit members of society upon their return to the world which we all know." To help in this readjustment, the club has subscribed to a garden magazine, a magazine teaching knitting and other handwork, and one teaching the dressmaking crafts, and made them available to the inmates.

They are now starting to collect books which will form the nucleus of a circulating library within the prison and contain not only fiction, but an English dictionary and books teaching shorthand. Undoubtedly this club is doing a great deal for the women inmates of the prison, but I am inclined to think the members of the club are deriving just as much good from what they are doing for the women they are helping. These personal contacts and observations which will give them an insight into human nature, an understanding of the difficulties and problems met by all types of human beings, cannot help but be educational for the women who are making this opportunity for themselves.

Try Simple Foot Exercises To Strengthen Your Arches

By Ida Jean Kain.

Feet hurt more in the hot weather and, outside of worry, there is nothing so devastating to your looks, aching feet will put lines in your face and will do even worse things to your figure.

Perhaps you are bringing it all on yourself. If your heels are run over, better get them fixed before the muscles are weakened and all 26 bones are out of sorts.

Runover heels are visible evidence that you are walking incorrectly and that should be fixed, too. The commonest mistake in walking is "loping out." Instead of walking with the feet pointed straight ahead, the weight is inclined toward the outer border of the foot—its weakest position!

Since incorrect weight-bearing subjects the foot to strain, it is very important that heavy people walk correctly. The arch may be high and weak or low and strong, or vice versa. The height of the arch does not seem to matter. It is the lowering of the arch in weight-bearing that causes the trouble. The arches can be strengthened by foot exercises. Walk a straight line barefoot—one foot directly ahead of the other. toes curled under and the weight thrown to the outer borders.

Now for some foot aid. If you can possibly manage the time, start the day off with contrast baths, placing the feet in fairly hot water, then in cold water. Scrub vigorously with a not too soft brush, dry with a rough towel, and use one of those delightful foot powders to check that excessive perspiration, which causes your feet to smart and burn.

Of course, you'll start off with a fresh pair of stockings, and, while you are about it, make sure your feet are long enough. You know what short shoes do to your feet! Well, short stockings are almost as bad. If you wear your hose out in the toes, the chances are that they are too short.

If you are on your feet most of the day, one of the most restful things you can do is to have an extra pair of shoes and change to them around noon. Even with these precautions, however, the feet still bear the brunt of the day's work, and Columnist Alice Hughes recently made the suggestion that department stores have facilities in the staff dressing rooms whereby the girls could have a five to 10-minute foot massage during the day—on the house! There's a tip that would pay dividends!

At the end of the day you can be your own masseuse. Follow the massage with another of those contrast baths and when you lie down for a rest, elevate the feet on a stack of pillows. This reverses the flow of circulation. Poor circulation is at the bottom of most foot troubles—that, and carelessly fitted shoes—and these corrective measures will make a new woman of you.

ECONOMY BEGINS AT HOME.

Legislators were contentious in carrying out Governor Raymond E. Baldwin's plea for economy in Connecticut. Instead of 100 voting the usual $4,000 for a new gubernatorial sedan, they decided the governor would have to ride in one costing $3,000.

Atlanta Belles Test Their Skill At Sailing Boats at Sea Island

By Sally Forth.

SAILING will probably occupy first attention during the coming week of Janet Allcorn, who is entertaining at her guests Patricia Slater and Caroline Yundt at the beach cottage of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hank Allcorn, on St. Simons Island. You see, the trio has chartered a trim sail boat from the Sea Island Yacht Yards, and almost any day is to be seen skimming the waters of Saint Simons sound. Incidentally, it is probably an unusually busy summer for Janet, who is serving as a member of the staff for The Star, weekly newspaper issued for the island colonies, with Lorette Tift, of Tifton, a University of Georgia journalism student, as editor.

Also enjoying sailing are Dot and Jessie Bradley, who sail with Elliott Patterson Jr. and his mother Billy, probably the most experienced and skillful sailors at the resort and owners of both a motor and a sail boat. On Friday, Elliott Patterson with the Bradley's and Dick Woods, of Kansas City, Mo., went on an all-day sail, landing on an island each to enjoy the picnic lunch they had taken with them.

House parties are the order of the day at Sea Island. One of the most interesting groups is that at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hardin, of Forsyth, where their daughter, Hazel, and son, Nat Hardin, have as guests Virginia Willis, of Atlanta; Anne Turner, Maxon, Nadia Barnett, Jacksonville; Anne Elizabeth Nelson, Forsyth, and Charles Willis, Cambridge; Hugh Chapman and Charner Hill, Forsyth. Definitely one of the island's "glamor girls," Virginia Willis is known for her striking outfits, and none can top her beach ensemble in tones of lavender and cyclamen, the bathing suit bra top secured by a lei of lavender flowers. Also an island "glamor girl" is blond Helen Birdsey, of Macon, who is a popular figure at the various dances and parties.

At their cottage Mr. and Mrs. C. Blount, of Atlanta, have with them their children, Betty and George Blount Jr., and as guests Roy Dorsey, Emily Pruitt and Alice Mitchell.

Well known to Atlantans are Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Gantt, of Covington, Ohio, who are occupying a Sea Island cottage for the month and have with them their children, Lila Gantt, John and Dan Gantt, and as guests, Marjorie Upton and Jack Gantt, of Atlanta; Mary and Eugenia Anderson, of Macon.

Mr. and Mrs. Carson M. Sewell, with their guests, Dick Blake, of Asheville, N. C.; also Mr. and Mrs. Tom Sinkler and their daughter; Mrs. Allan Artley and Mrs. Fred Hoyt.

THE "best-laid plans" of best men as well as "mice" and the ordinary run of men "gang" off to sea, as it turned out, in the case of plans made by a prominent bridegroom of recent date. Practically perfect, air-tight plans had been formulated by the bridegroom and his best man for the untended get-away of the happy couple for the honeymoon trip.

The plan included a dash to the East Lake Country Club in a borrowed car immediately after the ceremony, the couple to be met there by the best man and the maid of honor, with whom they were to change automobiles and go their separate and unmolested ways. Sounded simple enough.

But on the way to the club, the bride and groom found they were being pursued. Naturally, they assumed some of the wedding party had got wind of their plans and were trailing them. The bridegroom speeded up, reached East Lake, and effected the exchange of the automobiles. So far as Sally knows, the honeymooners went on their way to "live happily ever after."

But not so with the poor best man with the maid of honor. In the car turned over to them by the groom, they heaved a sigh of relief over a job well done and settled back to chat and relax after the hurry and bustle of the wedding. They relaxed too soon and it proved their undoing. Shortly after they left East Lake, the officers of the law (the pursuers of the bride and groom) drew up alongside the car and charged them with speeding and attempting to elude them.

The best man proved his sportsmanship by accepting the challenge (and the ticket) but he did demur at the unkindness of fate. The officer commented that all that fine raiment worn by the best man would indicate that he could well afford to pay a fine. To which the best man replied: "Heck! You don't think I own this outfit, do you?"

As a matter of fact, Sally happens to know that he does own it!

LETOURNEAU EQUIPMENT IS BIG FEATURE WITH YANCEY

THIRD LARGEST DEALER IN WORLD FOR LETOURNEAU

Yancey Visited Multi-Millionaire's Opening of Big Toccoa Plant.

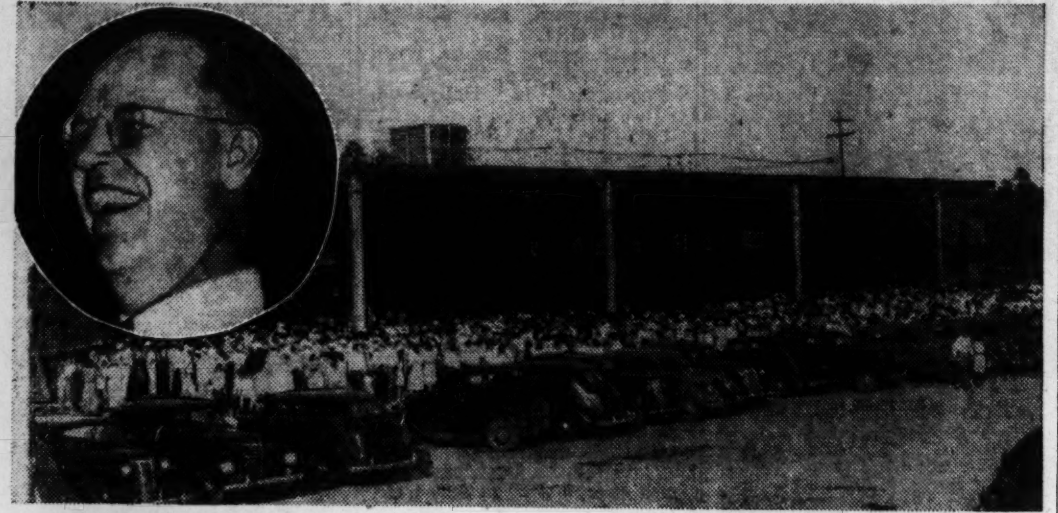

Being the third largest dealer in the world in distributing the products of R. G. Letourneau, America's foremost creator of road-building machinery, gave to Goodloe Yancey, head of Yancey Brothers, in this city, a genuine thrill to head a large motorcade from Atlanta to Toccoa a few days ago, when the new $2,000,000 factory of the road-machinery creator was dedicated in that thriving little north Georgia city.

Since 1934 Yancey Brothers have been handling the many and varied pieces of road-building machinery manufactured by the Letourneau plants at Stockton, Cal., and Peoria, Ill.

Now that the multi-millionaire, known all over the world not only as a road-building machinery genius, but a devout Christian gentleman, had come into Georgia and built a great plant, Mr. Yancey was delighted to visit the dedicatory exercises and to escort a number of his business friends and associates to Toccoa to meet this successful captain of industry, who told his audience of 4,000 north Georgians how he had been won to the cause of religion, and assured them that "my faith in God has brought blessings on my business."

Mr. Letourneau was attracted to Toccoa more than a year ago by the work of Dr. R. A. Forrest, president of Toccoa Falls Institute. Dr. Forrest had explained to Letourneau how, at Toccoa Falls Institute, he trained young boys of north Georgia in work that would earn them a living.

Yancey Brothers Dealers in Letourneau Equipment

Pictured above is a part of the large crowd that attended the dedication of the new $2,000,000 factory of Letourneau at Toccoa a few days ago. In the upper left Mr. Letourneau is showing how happy he is at the wonderful reception accorded him and his new factory. Goodloe Yancey, whose company is the third largest dealers in the world in Letourneau equipment, headed a large motorcade to Toccoa.

The boys, many of them orphans and most of them without funds to earn their own education, were maintained at the school through the philanthropies of successful citizens interested in Dr. Forrest's work.

Letourneau decided that a mill in the neighborhood of Toccoa would bring him into contact with ambitious young Americans eager to earn their living.

Already, more than 200 north Georgians are working for him at this mill near Toccoa, where prosperity has put all the citizens to work, its many industries in recent months having necessitated the conversion of an abandoned church building into a home for workmen.

Among the Letourneau road-building equipment handled by Yancey Brothers are scrapers, angle dozers, bull dozers, road rippers, tamping rollers and the like. However, while handing this complete line, and, as already stated, being the third largest dealers in the world on Letourneau products, the Atlanta concern will also stress the value of the "Tournapull," a powerful piece of machinery, and it is understood, the only type of road machinery that will be built at the Toccoa factory. In fact, the Toccoa plant will be the only place in the world where the special piece of machinery will be built.

"Tournapull" is powered by an eight-cylinder, 160-horsepower "Caterpillar" Diesel engine. On it will be the largest tires in the world. It is one of the largest and most successful dirt-movers ever manufactured, moving 30 yards of dirt at one haul. It is an automatic, self-performing giant of a machine, that roots up the earth, lifts it into its own body, hauls it away as fast as any truck, and then dumps it where desired, even spreading it out evenly to any desired depth. Just one man handles the big monster machine. It works on two wheels, and can turn around in its own length, making its movability unusually convenient, and can return for loadings at the rate of 30 miles per hour.

5 Mutual Benefit Life Writers Win Trip

Five Georgia representatives of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company have qualified for attendance at the Company's Leaders Club convention to be held at Spring Lake, N. J., in September of this year.

The men who won this honor through their outstanding production are James T. Causey and Karl Thompson, of Atlanta; E. C. B. Danforth Jr., of Augusta; W. H. Cobb, of Americus, and M. L. Ivey, of Cordele.

Qualification for this convention, which is held only once in two years, is reserved for the leading producers of the Mutual Benefit and the meeting will include many educational features, stressing the latest developments in the life insurance business. At the conclusion of the meeting, many of the Leaders Club members expect to attend the New York World's Fair.

DEKALB SUPPLY CO. RENDERS COMPLETE BUILDING SERVICE

Decatur Concern Delivering Many Turn-Key Jobs to Satisfied Customers.

Supplying lumber and all manner of building materials to the trade is not all that the Dekalb Supply Company, located at 919 Sycamore street, in Decatur, is doing these days for the homeseeker.

For some time now the big lumber concern has been turning its attention not only to the supplying of building materials, but has kept its forces busy in the actual erection of homes, furnishing everything from the lot, if desired, to a complete turn-key job.

That means that for the homes the company is building everything is provided by it—the blueprints and plans, the lumber, the brick, the roof, the paint, the plumbing—in fact, the customer has only to select his plans from the many submitted, express his preference for paint colors and other details, and then leave the rest to the lumber company. Even all the details of FHA financing are handled by the company, and when the well-built and modern home is completed it is ready for the new owner to step into it, with every modern convenience at his or her command.

This complete building service by the lumber company has proven a great convenience to homeseekers, and scores have taken advantage of it. It leaves none of the scores of little and sometimes big details to harass the customer—such as many find when it comes to building a home.

Surrounding itself with experienced people to fully carry out its complete home-building service, customers can rely upon every detail of the contract. Joe Brown, a man with large experience, is the sales manager for the building department. He sees to it that nothing is overlooked in completing any building job. Otis H. Jones is superintendent of construction, a man of experience and reliability. Charlie Mabry is manager of the wall and floor covering department, and his advice and suggestions are valuable to prospective home-owners.

Another feature in the building service of the company is the able and helpful suggestions of Mrs. Kay Fischer, who has charge of the interior decorative department. Her advice as to harmony of colors, the selection of rugs and draperies and slip covers, and the various things that enter into the beauty of a home, has proven popular with the women for whom homes have already been built.

The Dekalb Supply Company not only builds for individuals anywhere in the Atlanta area—homes of "Personality" and "Guideway" homes—but it has a most attractive tract of land known as Sycamore Heights, embracing some 25 to 30 lots, 64x256 feet, where one can select his or her site, and on which a complete turn-key job will be erected. The company has already completed four pretty homes, now occupied, with two more under construction, and three more to be started soon. These are five to six-room modern homes, selling in a range of $3,000 to $4,000, and are being erected, in most cases, for definite home purchasers.

The company handles a complete line of Lucas famous paints and wallpapers, and a wide selection in these lines is offered prospective home-buyers. Also are carried Venetian blinds, Oriental and domestic rugs—in fact, floor coverings of all kinds.

Recently the company erected a most attractive five-room model home at 2545 Tilton drive, in the East Lake Country Club section, and since it has been opened for inspection by the public, scores of hundreds have visited it and admired it. It continues open for the public. It is a pretty white brick, partially furnished, with automatic hot water, winter air-conditioning, Venetian blinds, a fireproof daylight basement, attached garage—in fact everything that enters into the making of a perfect home.

The Dekalb Supply Company is one of the oldest and most reliable concerns of its kind in this entire section. It has been engaged in the lumber and building material supply business for nearly 40 years.

Expert Sales, Working Force of Dekalb Supply Co.

Here are those who are busy handling the complete home-building service for the Dekalb Supply Company, of Decatur. Left to right, Joe Brown, sales manager; Mrs. Kay Fischer, in charge of interior decorative department; B. W. Baker, assistant sales manager; Otis H. Jones, superintendent of construction; Charlie Mabry, manager wall and floor covering department.

Make Your Home or Office Cooler, Install Western Venetian Blinds

There is no better proof of the quality and popularity of a product than the quantity of its users. That's why the Western Venetian Blind Company, located at 346 Jones avenue, at Marietta street, has recently had to install additional equipment to take care of the demands for its products.

For over 30 years Western Venetian blinds have been used in fine offices and homes all over the world, and since opening the plant in Atlanta the first of this year hundreds of installations have been made in Atlanta homes and institutions. The following hospital installations are still another indication of the superior quality of Western Venetian blinds:

TARZAN AND THE FIRES OF TOHR No. 121

As their own elephant fled, leaving them stranded, Ukah and D'Arnot saw a band of elephant-mounted men dashing toward them, apparently a Tohran patrol. "Quick! Into the trees!" Ukah urged. "Perhaps they're coming to the water hole—haven't seen us yet."

Up strong vines they clambered to their uncertain refuge. Screened by foliage, Ukah kept watch on the advancing patrol. Suddenly he blinked, then his eyes grew wide with wonder. He scrambled down from the tree, and started running to meet the advancing patrol.

At first, D'Arnot believed that the frightful experiences of the past few days had driven his companion mad. Then Ukah signaled him to descend. "It is my father, the Shah of Rator!" the giant cried. Presently father and son were clasping hands in happy reunion.

Ukah quickly explained his project. "I have friends in Tohr. They must be delivered at once." The Shah shook his head sadly. "Twice while you were a prisoner I led attacks against the gates of Tohr. Each time we were hurled back. The city of Ahies is impregnable!"
